

Carter accepts Sadat invitation

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said Monday that President Carter has accepted an invitation to come to Egypt for the signing of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty resulting from the historic Camp David accords.

Addressing his parliament on the summit accords, Sadat said they could not have been successful without Carter's "perseverance."

The White House said Carter wants to attend the signing, but press secretary Jody Powell said he did not know if it will be held in Egypt.

Authorities said any Carter visit to Egypt depends on how quickly Egypt and Israel can forge a treaty to end 30 years of war in the Mideast. The talks are to open at the ministerial level in Washington Oct. 12 with a projected settlement by Dec. 17. The United States will be a full participant, Powell said.

"President Carter will go down in history as one of the great leaders who changed the face of history from bitterness to love and from wars to peace," Sadat told parliament.

"I tell our people that our history and the history of civilization will place Carter among those who changed history," Sadat said to thunderous applause.

"I have no doubt that every Egyptian man and woman will await this visit to express to a great man their admiration and great appreciation," he said.

Sadat's comments suggested Carter would receive a welcome surpassing that given former President Nixon in 1974 when he was cheered by millions of Egyptians.

Sadat had harsh words for Arab leaders critical of the Camp David accords and who call him a traitor for signing the agreement with Israel.

He called Col. Moammar Khadafi of Libya "a crazy child."

He invited King Hussein of Jordan to "assume his responsibilities. I invite Syrian officials to take part in the talks so as to deal with the Israeli withdrawal from the Golan (Heights)," he said.

He also called on leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organization to end their "farical" differences.

"This is what Egypt was able to do at this stage.... We do not claim to have reached a comprehensive settlement, but we have prepared the road toward a comprehensive settlement," Sadat said.

"If any Arab leadership can do better, we say to it 'yes' in all sincerity," Sadat continued.

On domestic issues, Sadat said peace will be followed by formation of a new cabinet and a new prosperity.

"I know there are now demands that I devote as much energy to the internal front as I devoted to the search for peace," Sadat said. "I know there is criticism of me."

Funeral Wednesday

Thousands view pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church will jointly celebrate Pope John Paul I's outdoor funeral Mass with the same solemn simplicity that marked the funeral of Pope Paul VI less than two months ago, the Vatican announced Monday.

Forty of the 127 cardinals, those who have arrived in Rome, met in the Apostolic Palace to complete arrangements for Wednesday's funeral.

In a drenching rain outside, meanwhile, tens of thousands under umbrellas and huddled beneath Bernini's tall colonnade on St. Peter's Square streamed into the basilica to view the pope's body, lying in state on a catafalque before the main altar.

The cardinals set the time of the funeral Mass, atop the broad marble steps of St. Peter's, at 4 p.m. Wednesday — 11 a.m. EDT. It is expected to be televised worldwide. The celebrated Mass will be presided over by 85-year-old Italian Cardinal Carlo Confalonieri, the dean of the College of Cardinals, who also led the funeral service for Pope Paul.

The Congregation of Cardinals, administering the 700-million-member church in the period between popes, also issued a statement expressing "worry, apprehension and sorrow" over the renewed heavy fighting in Lebanon. John Paul, who died last Thursday of a heart attack after just 34 days as pope, was reported to have been considering a trip to that war-torn country in an attempt to act as a peacemaker.

The outdoor consecration of a papal requiem Mass was new with Pope Paul's funeral. He had specified repeatedly he wanted a simple service and burial. Previous papal funerals were indoors and involved elaborate services over days.

After Wednesday's Mass, the body of Pope John Paul will be buried opposite the tomb of his immediate predecessor, in the grotto of the basilica.

Because it was the start of a work week, the line of mourners waiting in the downpour for a last glimpse of the pope was smaller than the crowds Sunday, when an estimated 300,000 braved a steady rain to view the body.

Longtime Vatican observers called it the greatest outpouring of affection for a dead pontiff in recent times. Well over a half-million had viewed the body in four days.

The pope's face looked gray and waxen, and the basilica was shut down periodically Monday so morticians could retouch it. Embalmers said sudden death caused the body to deteriorate faster but that they expected it to remain on public display until the funeral.

The cardinals arriving in Rome for the funeral and the conclave to elect the next pope, which begins Oct. 14, have indicated they will be looking for a man like Cardinal Albino Luciani, who became Pope John Paul I — meaning a cardinal with substantial "pastoral" experience as a leader of faithful and no connection with the central church administration.

Theft news tip wins $15 prize

A news tip about the theft of a priceless painting from the Harold B. Lee Library has won this week's news tip award from the Daily Universe.

According to Daily Universe Managing Editor Daryl Gibson, the first place award — a $15 cash prize — will go to the tipster, who wished to remain anonymous.

"Like we have done in the past, we will protect the anonymity of any caller who furnishes us with a news tip," Gibson said.

Gibson said the first-place award has been changed from a dinner for two to the cash award. "This way, the award can be used for anything the tipster wants to use it for, not just a dinner."

Second- and third-place awards for the week went to Larry Brown and Art Winnen, respectively.

Governor visits campus; tackles current issues

By LARRY WERNER

Utah is growing three times faster than most states, with cities such as Sandy receiving an influx of 10,000 new residents per year, Utah Governor Scott Matheson said at BYU Monday.

The governor's remarks were part of a daylong visit to Utah County, which included a meeting with BYU's Department of Government, answering BYU students' questions in a political science class, meeting with city and county officials, touring U.S. Steel's Geneva works, visiting with elderly citizens and answering current affairs questions at Timview High School.

Speaking to faculty members of the economics and government departments, Matheson said growth in Utah is going to continue and it will need management and planning.

"People like it here in Utah," he said. "They want to raise their families here. Our challenge is not to stop growth but to control it, so we can maintain the standard of living."

Great numbers of tourists are also coming to Utah, Matheson said. Tourism is expected to bring over $400 million dollars into the state this year, he added.

"Next to Temple Square and Zion's National Park, the Great Salt Lake generates the greatest interest," he said. He added that $5 million has been allotted by the state for development of the lake's south shore to aid the tourism.

Recent action by citizens groups to cut taxes also brought comments from the governor. Matheson said he favors putting a ceiling on the increase of property taxes and phasing out the state sales tax on food.

"I think that the public is interested in having their taxes used very frugally. They don't want to cut back on necessary programs such as education, but they know waste is going on in government and they want it stopped," he said.

Matheson said the state is studying the best way to phase out the tax on food, which brings the state $45 million annually in tax dollars. He also said he opposes a constitutional amendment to put a ceiling on property taxes but strongly favors some type of statutory limit.

Air pollution, particularly in Utah Valley, was a major topic of concern in both the faculty meeting and a later meeting with students in Omar Kader's current affairs class.

"Certainly no one wants to hurt Geneva's ability to meet competition," Dr. Keith J. Melville, professor of government, said. "But where do we draw the line between economic progress and clean air?"

Matheson said the federal government has the responsibility for setting and enforcing the air quality standards. "But Geneva has been involved in upgrading their equipment to meet the standards for years. We hope to complete the process in incremental steps."

Matheson looked at the subject personally in an earlier tour of Geneva. During his tour, Matheson was informed by company officials of their concern for competition from foreign steel, which accounts for 45 percent of sales in the Western United States, Matheson told the teachers.

"Another problem Utah faces is the growth of enrollment in public schools," he continued. "This year we have approximately 325,000 students enrolled."

Death penalties stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, refusing to review the validity of Utah's capital punishment laws, Monday let stand the death sentences given to two men convicted in a heinous triple murder.

The justices turned down the appeals of Dale Pierre and William Andrews, sentenced to die in front of a firing squad for the bizarre 1974 deaths of three Ogden, Utah, residents.

Search warrants still effective

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to reconsider its ruling, announced in May, that police may obtain warrants to search newspaper offices without first trying to get desired materials through a subpoena.

The justices turned away a request by lawyers for Stanford University's student newspaper to admit, in effect, that the high court made a mistake.

The May decision grew out of a police search of the Stanford Daily office on the university's Palo Alto, Calif., campus in 1971.

Syrians rescue troopers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Under the cover of one of Beirut's fiercest artillery and rocket attacks in recent memory, Syrian troops Monday rescued 50 fellow soldiers who had been trapped for two days by Christian militiamen.

Meanwhile, President Elias Sarkis promised to try to make another attempt at ending the warfare that has cost hundreds in killed and wounded in less than a week.

Swimmer escapes shark

ABOARD THE IDLE DAY (AP) — A five-foot white-tip shark came within a few feet of mauling swimmer Stella Taylor shortly after dawn Monday, forcing her briefly from the water.

But the shark was killed with a single shot from a .44-caliber Magnum, and Miss Taylor, 46, was soon back in the water, resuming her 70-strokes-a-minute pace on her quest to swim from Bimini to Florida.

In Utah...

Exemptions may be taxed

BYU may lose tax exemption benefits within 30 days if energy legislation, introduced by Utah's Senator Orrin G. Hatch, is not passed by this session of Congress.

According to Hatch, educational institutions operated in Utah by LDS and Catholic churches could be hurt by the IRS regulations, which eliminate tax exemption status to the schools because of "discrimination."

"This really shows the lack of interest and study by the IRS on this subject," Hatch said. "By their very definition, private and parochial, non-profit schools are discriminatory because they cater to a specific segment of the population."

Police arrest 'miser'

A bearded, male transient in tattered jeans was arrested Saturday by Provo Police officers, who referred to him as a "tramp," but they later discovered $3,700 in coins from the U.S. Mint stashed in his boots, and uncashed Social Security checks.

Provo Police Detective Glade Terry said the man was picked up at 1055 East Center Street for lewdness, or indecent exposure.

The transient had six $390 disability checks in his possession. "The man said he was receiving the checks due to a back injury," Terry said.

Provo Lt. Bud G. Gillman said the man was "hoarding" his checks and money. "We checked him out and we found no reason to believe there were any thefts involved," he said.

Foster parents win case

The fourth district court ruled last weekend that 17-month-old Kerrie must be returned to the home of her foster parents in Moab, pending a final decision on where she will be placed for adoption.

The adoption case has been in the limelight for the past six weeks while Mr. and Mrs. Walston fought the decision against their right to adopt the child they have cared for since she was two-and-a-half months old.

Staff needed for ASBYU

The ASBYU Executive Secretary's Office, headed by Leslie Kingston, needs students to work in hospitality committees, public relations, correspondence and secretarial positions.

Those interested in working in this office should go to the ASBYU executive offices on the fourth floor of the Wilkinson Center.

Y Security takes second

BYU Security took second place Saturday in a statewide law enforcement baseball tournament.

The FBI took first place with a 24-12 win in the championship game, Sgt. Richard J. Townsend, player-coach of the Security team, said.

"We surprised people," D. Clive Winn, sergeant over the patrol division, said. "The FBI didn't expect us to do anything."

Townsend, sergeant over investigation, said the FBI-sponsored tournament lasted five days. Security played seven games in the double-elimination tournament. "Our main problem was that we haven't played enough," he said.

Winn said the tournament helped to unite the department. "Where there had been hard feelings before, playing together helped us resolve them. Winn said some officers switched shifts so that others could play.

Saturday parade changed to 8:30

BYU's Homecoming parade has been moved to 8:30 a.m. Saturday because of the rescheduling of the football game against Utah State.

The game has been changed to 11 a.m. for a regional telecast on the ABC network.

"The parade was originally scheduled for 9:30 Saturday morning," said Homecoming Chairman Heather Jardine, a senior from Oxnard, Calif. "However, since the game was moved from 1:30 p.m. to 11 a.m., we decided to move the parade up also."

The parade will begin at 600 E. Center and move west on University Avenue, ending at the Smith Fieldhouse parking lot, said Parade Chairman Lark Jardine, a freshman from Oxnard, Calif.

The parade will last about one hour, with units traveling on both sides of the street, he said.

J. Willard Marriott, nationally known businessman and primary contributor for the Marriott Center, will head the parade as grand marshal.

University and government officials, political candidates and five bands will be interspersed among the 30 floats in the parade. The 165-piece Cougar Band will follow the combined BYU Air Force and Army ROTC units' color guard to lead the parade through the route. Hundreds of BYU students will participate on floats, in dancing and singing groups and as clowns.

Today is the official beginning of Homecoming Week, Miss Jardine said. The Homecoming committee has planned an arm wrestling contest with male and female divisions from 6-9 p.m. today in the Reception Center, ELWC.

The contest is open to all interested students. Registration for the event will be at 6 p.m. in the Reception Center. Awards will be given to the winners, she added.

The Homecoming Queen's Banquet is at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Skyroom, said Susan Paxman, Women's Office vice president.

This Homecoming activity is "by invitation only," Miss Paxman said.

Romney urges involvement

By FRANK RIGBY
Universe Staff Writer

An informed and united public is the most powerful force in bringing about public reform, former Michigan Governor George Romney said Monday, as he kicked off BYU Political Week.

Romney held the crowd of about 1,000 in the main ballroom of the Wilkinson Center spellbound, relating his philosophy gained through political experience in Michigan and Washington D.C.

"The only alternative for our problems is for citizens to organize and use the basic power of organized citizens to create public understanding and give the elected officials a base to do what is necessary," the Michigan Republican said.

Romney, a former secretary of Housing and Urban Development in the Nixon administration, emphasized that the greatest lesson he learned in politics was that people need to be educated to the real problems facing society.

Romney shared his experiences of working on a citizens group before becoming Michigan governor. The group was formed to study the funding of deteriorating Detroit schools.

"Several proposals for school funding were defeated by special-interest groups who distorted the real issue. As part of the citizens group, we decided the first need was to unify and educate the citizens," he said.

He then outlined how each of 182 proposals made by the citizens group were approved, after carefully educating the public about their necessity. The approval came over the strong disapproval of special-interest groups in Detroit, even though taxes were actually increased because of it.

"The people passed the proposals because they understood them," Romney said.

Romney also emphasized lack of public understanding as a major cause of politicians' reluctance to take proper action. He related how President Nixon turned down a major economic proposal, not because of its quality, but because he was afraid the people wouldn't support it.

"I found proposals were rejected by the President and Congress, not because they didn't understand them, but because they didn't believe the public would understand. With a lack of public understanding they thought the powerful special interests would thwart them," Romney said.

Romney pointed at special-interest groups as one of the causes of inflation. "All the special interests are organized to get what they want," he said. "A triple alliance consisting of special interests, the bureaucracy and Congress are all pulling against each other until the government drifts with no real policy."

Politicians are quick to suggest solutions because of political pressure on them from the special-interest groups, he added.

"Politicians are the most cautious people in the world. When issues are controversial, they don't mention them and we can't expect these people to do things politically to jeopardize their position," Romney said.

Therefore, Romney said he is working to organize groups to educate the public and give the specific support necessary for politicians to take proper action.

As a Mormon, Romney said, "I'm well aware of the prophecy that the elders of the church will come to the constitution's aid when it hangs by a thread."

"Still, I'm convinced the constitution won't be saved by just electing a man president. The president can't turn it around without greater public understanding than we have at this time."

"However," he added, "I'm convinced that the church members, with their greater religious base to understand the importance of this country, can become the most important influence in uniting and teaching the citizens."

Elder Faust views calling, church growth, problems

"It has been my privilege to be an eyewitness to the majesty of the coming of the Lord Jesus in many countries in South America," he said.

As a missionary in Brazil, Elder Faust served as president of the Sao Paulo and Belo Horizonte districts. After returning from his mission, he joined the U.S. Air Force and served during World War II.

After six months of practicing law, Elder Faust served in Utah's House of Representatives at the age of 28, and was a member of the Judiciary Committee.

"I had just started my law practice and it was such an engrossing experience that it just about did me in financially. In those days we got paid $300 dollars a session."

He said he was impressed while serving in the House that Utah's public servants were "decent, honorable, honest people trying to serve well the people of the state of Utah."

Elder Faust said he could not have succeeded in life without the love and support of his wife, Ruth Wright Faust. "I must express my love and appreciation to my wife," he said. "She is the best part of me. I couldn't have served and done the work that I've been called to do in the church or in the public area, without her support."

The Faustus have five children and eight grandchildren.

Political Awareness Week activities begin at Y

By FRANK RIGBY
Universe Staff Writer

Twelve major speakers and a political debate will be featured during Political Week, as the ASBYU Academics Office tries to promote political awareness on campus.

Adam Self, Political

Week chairman, said "Political Week, which actually is going to last three weeks, will fill the students' need to know about their government and politics."

"We've succeeded in bringing in a good balance of speakers, including Democrats, Republicans and federal, state and city officials. We feel the speakers can satisfy most anyone's interest."

Speakers include BYU political science professor Lee Farnsworth, Thursday; Salt Lake City Mayor Ted Wilson, Friday; Federal Reserve Board member Sidney Jones, Oct. 9; and congressional candidate Jed Richardson, LDS Church lawyer Oscar McConkie and Republican National Committeewoman Amy Valentine on Oct. 11.

Next week Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch and ERA opponent Phyllis Schafly will speak Oct. 12, followed by Utah Congressman Gunn McKay and Sen. Jake Garn Oct. 13 and Nevada Congressman James Santini Oct. 16.

Political Week will close Oct. 18 with a debate between Utah Congressman Dan Marriott and challenger Ed Firmage. "It will be the first of two scheduled debates between the two men before the final election," Self said.

Self said there are so many good speakers, "we could not schedule them all in one week."

Political Week is a traditional activity usually held during major political years. It is held about every two years and is largest during a presidential election year.

The week, which officially runs from Oct. 9-14, will include a display in the ELWC Reception Center. The display will feature a booth where students can register for the upcoming final election, Self said.

Also, Young Democrats and College Republicans, two political groups on campus, will have booths on display. "Both groups will have information on state and local candidates for students to refer to," he said.

The Young Democrats and College Republicans will give a presentation on Oct. 10, defining "What is a Democrat?" and "What is a Republican?"

Self said political films will be shown Oct. 10-13 in the Varsity Theater. A videotape will be shown in the reception center during the lunch hour.

The Academics Office is hoping for a large turnout of students for Political Week speeches and activities. "I've felt the students were generally apathetic about politics and we want to change this," Self said.

"To try to excite students, we've brought in people who are involved with present politics."

CPR workshop to offer training for certification

A little boy falls out of a tree and can't get his breath.

An auto accident victim suffers a heart attack.

Individuals who suffer similar crises can be helped by people who are trained in administering cardipulmonary resuscitation (CPR), said Dr. Keith Karren, assistant professor of health science at BYU.

American Red Cross certification and college credit in health science is available to participants in a three-day workshop in CPR Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, said Gary R. Bascom, workshop coordinator.

"Many hearts could go on beating for years if given a second chance, and it is comforting to know that you have the skills to give them that chance if the situation arises," Karren said.

In CPR, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and rhythmic pressure on the chest are used to maintain oxygen intake and blood circulation until the victim can get medical assistance.

"It's a helpless feeling to be near a heart attack victim and not know what to do," Karren said. "Perhaps the only thing worse is to make a mistake under those conditions."

Students and community patrons interested in taking the CPR workshop may contact Special Courses and Conferences, 242 HRCB.

Former Right to Life head to speak at today's forum

A former president of the National Right to Life Committee will address students and visitors in today's Forum assembly at 10 a.m. in the Marriott Center.

Dr. Mildred F. Jefferson, general surgeon and assistant clinical professor of surgery at Boston University Medical Center, will speak on the subject, "What Value of Life? What Quality?" She will deal with the protection of life in a sound society.

"There must be choices which are allowed and there must be those which are refused. The individual must not be granted the right to choose irresponsible control over life and death," the doctor said.

Dr. Jefferson earned her B.A. degree at Texas College in Tyler, Texas, and her master's degree at Tufts University in Medford, Mass. She then studied at Harvard Medical School where she received her M.D. degree. She has since been awarded 13 honorary doctoral degrees from colleges and universities throughout the United States.

She served as chairman of the board of directors of the National

Right to Life Committee, Inc., an organization which has more than 3,000 anti-abortion groups and 11 million supporters affiliated with it.

Anti-abortion slide show to be presented Thursday by Right to Life chapter

The public is invited to a free slide presentation, "Abortion: How It Is," Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Provo Utilities Auditorium, according to Valerie Stewart, publicity director of the Provo chapter of Right to Life.

The slide presentation, sponsored by Right to Life, was written and narrated by Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Wilke, internationally known experts in human sexuality.

The presentation, Mrs. Stewart said, will discuss what actually happens when an abortion is performed. A discussion period will follow.

The main purpose of the club is to "educate the community on what abortion really is," Mrs. Stewart said. She added she would like to get students involved in the organization.

Guest speakers and slide presentations on abortion are available to any interested group wanting information, she said.

For further information, contact Valerie Stewart at 374-0770 or club president Donald Doty at 377-5643.

Pressmen still try to settle

NEW YORK (AP) — A tentative settlement between stubborn pressmen and the New York Post is expected to put pressure on New York's two other dailies and may herald an end to the city's 7 1/2-week-old newspaper strike.

The Post, an afternoon tabloid, has been bargaining separately with the 1,500 striking pressmen since last week.

Despite the settlement, announced Sunday night, negotiations continued Monday. A ratification vote was scheduled for today.

Post publisher Rupert Murdoch and William Kennedy, president of the Printing Pressmen's Union No. 2, were not immediately available for comment.

The pressmen were scheduled to continue negotiations with the New York Times and the Daily News Monday at offices of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Before the afternoon paper can publish, it must settle with paperhandlers and machinists on strike against all three papers and the Newspaper Guild, whose editorial and commercial employees are striking only the Post.

MAKE A DATE WITH YOUR FUTURE.

That's when I'll have General Dynamics
representatives visiting your campus to interview graduating engineers about their future.

We're in the heart of Southern California, just 35 miles east of Los Angeles. General Dynamics Pomona Division is one of the leading designers and builders of tactical missiles and armament systems in the world.

At Pomona our engineers and scientists are the best in the defense industry. I am seeking others who would like to be exposed to the new challenges to be found at the leading edge of technology.

For an interview appointment and details, see your Placement Office. If you can't make the interviews, then write me: Wade Hampton, College Relations Coordinator, General Dynamics, Pomona Division, Box 2507, Pomona, California 91766.

Either way, we'll tell you how General Dynamics can offer you an exciting engineering career, and we can talk about California living, too.

Artifacts from Peru donated to museum

By JULIE ASH
Universe Staff Writer

A valuable collection of Incan mummy shrouds, llama dolls and other artifacts have been donated to

Dr. Dale L. Berge, a general contractor in California and a BYU graduate, said he bought the Pre-Columbian collection from Brazil to the United States because it was illegal to transport Peruvian artifacts out of the country.

Berge said he purchased the collection from Harry Miller, a business manager in Brazil. Miller worked for the United Nations and acquired the artifacts during his stay in Peru. Berge's hobby is archaeology. He discovered a city along the South American coast," Spoerl said. After his stay in Peru, Miller moved to Brazil, and the collection was on display at the University of Brazil.

Miller's original plan was to find someone to purchase the collection and donate it to some university. He wanted to stay in one piece. I bought it to leave a place for it in BYU's geology museum," Spoerl explained.

The archaeology museum is situated in the basement of the Maeser Building.

Dr. Dale L. Berge, director of the geology museum, said, "Our district at BYU are to educate. This display is very valuable monetarily and educationally. Our museum is a library for archaeology students. We can learn to know the people in our past. From this exhibit we can learn about the people on the western coast of South America."

The artifacts include the headband of an Incan chief, burial shrouds made from llama wool and a deformed skull. Kim McBride, a senior in archaeology, said, "The skull may be the result of a custom which reshaped the head of a child for cosmetic purposes."

A musical instrument called a pan-pipe, which is made from reeds or bamboo, a stirrup-spouted jar that whistles, blackware typical of a culture on the western coast of South America, and a string notation system called quipu, which is made from either human or animal hair, are also included in the collection.

"Maybe the quipu are their temple accounts. It may keep track of how many people paid their tithing," Berge said.

He said the collection is unique because it represents a small cross sample of cultural materials from different periods. "Basically, the collection is exciting because it takes in quite a few cultures. Many of the pieces are in excellent condition."

Berge said the museum does not have the entire exhibit, but that Spoerl would donate the rest of the collection over the next few years.

California landslide ruins homes

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif. (AP) — An unexplained landslide of more than three hours duration Monday destroyed 20 homes, damaged five others and forced evacuation of 50 persons in this fashionable resort community, police said.

Streets collapsed and power poles and gas lines were severed in a hilly, three-block area, as residents were awakened before dawn by the slide, authorities said.

"You could see the dreadful breaking up of the houses, glass shattering," said John Wolfe, a resident of the area. "Walls were falling. It was dark up there and the power poles were collapsing and the stench of natural gas was awful."

It was not immediately known what caused the slide. "There was no rain and no earthquake," Deike said.

However, the area was pelted with record rainfall last spring.

Netters win invitational

The BYU women's tennis team swept the Weber State Fall Invitational last weekend at the Ogden Racquet club, shutting out all competition and monopolizing individual honors.

The Cougars posted a 9-0 record against Idaho State, Utah and host Weber State. The victories earned BYU a huge traveling trophy, and since no Cougar lost a match, BYU took home every singles and doubles trophy the tournament offered.

The highlight of the tournament, however, was an unofficial set played between BYU's No. 1 singles player, Maria Rothchild, and Idaho State Coach Duane Stotland. Rothchild crunched him, 6-1, and the coach, minus $25, said Rothchild was certainly due her No. 7 national ranking.

Sports

The Daily Universe

The real challenge of BYU's early match against Weber State was to try to lose games to the Utes than Utah had done the day before. The Utes had beaten Weber 9-0, losing only eight of the 108 games in the match.

According to plan, the Cougars defeated Weber 9-0, dropping only five games in all. This win made the final match between the Utes and the Cougars the championship match of the tournament.

A large and lively crowd appeared for the championship games in order to see the Cougars they had watched in the Ogden Virginia Slims tournament last January prior to their signing with BYU.

In No. 1 singles, Rothchild overpowered Utah's Patti Penn, 6-2, 6-0.

Wendy Barlow of BYU dropped the first set of her No. 2 singles match to Sherrie Chin in a 7-6 tiebreaker. In the second set, Barlow changed her strategy and breezed in 6-0. The final set involved some marathon exchanges, one lasting at least 70 shots, but Barlow pulled through to win, 6-3.

BYU's All-American, Tracy Tanner, back from a week-long absence because of a sore shoulder, defeated Lisa Spitz in the No. 3 position, 6-0, 6-3.

The Cougars' Charlene Murphy, No. 4, and Mindy Watts, No. 5, downed their respective Ute opponents Karen Larsen, 6-2, 6-3, and Lori Nelson, 6-4, 6-3. No. 6, Lani Wilcox, clipped Tori Forland, 6-4, 6-3.

In doubles action, the team of Rothchild and Murphy, who according to BYU Coach Ann Valentine, "are just beginning to gel," overpowered Penn and Chin, 6-3, 6-3.

Wilcox and Watts defeated Larsen and Nelson, 6-2, 6-0, and the Barlows, Wendy and Lori, took a 6-1, 6-1 win from Spitz and Forland.

All-American Tracy Tanner demonstrates the forehand which defeated Lisa Spitz in this week's Weber State Fall Invitational.

Cougar spikers third in tourney

The fifth-ranked Cougars placed third in the Women's Volleyball Preview invitational tournament Saturday night.

No. 1-ranked Utah State defeated a strong challenger, No. 8 Cal State Long Beach, to win the tournament.

BYU finished third by defeating Texas A&M, 15-9, 15-12, after the Aggies won the first game 16-14. Balanced team play paced the Cougars to their third-place finish as Angie Andrade, Kathy Mendonhall, Kari Pew and Lisa Motes all blocked and spiked well. Pew was named to the all-tournament team.

BYU began play Saturday with a win over Berkeley, 15-5, 15-12. Again, balanced play was evident among the Cougars, with some spectacular saves by Andrade.

The victory marks the second consecutive tournament win for USU, which took top honors at the Volleyball Classic at Pepperdine University, sponsored by Volleyball Magazine. The Aggies made it to the finals by defeating Arizona and Texas A&M in Saturday's play.

Cal State Long Beach, which won the San Jose Invitational Tournament last week, defeated Arizona State and BYU to challenge USU in the finals.

Even BYU's junior varsity team provided some tough competition Saturday, defeating Montana State and nearly winning over Weber State. Weber squeezed by the JV team 15-12, 15-12 to win the sixth-place pool teams playoff.

Readers widen prognostics lead

In the fourth week of football prognostics, Universe readers increased their lead after upending the sports staff in last weekend's predictions, 3-1.

New Mexico's determination to upset the Cougars this weekend destroyed the majority of predictions, as many had predicted a much more decisive victory by BYU.

In the battle for the free sweatshirt, Rick Roper, 24, a senior in zoology from Idaho, came away the winner.

Six stories, one plot: The Romance of Our Age is Technology.

Rendezvous in Spain.
 You're a software applications specialist. When you picked this career, you never dreamed that one day you'd rendezvous in Barcelona, Spain.

Not many destroyers. But when your company is Texas Instruments and one of your customers is the U.S. Sixth Fleet, you learn to expect the unexpected. The destroyers are equipped with Ticomputers and they need new software fast. You come aboard and sail with the Fleet until your job is completed.

Not a bad assignment for a software specialist named Susie. You're glad you got into technology.

The Incredible Talking Chip.
 You're an integrated circuit designer at TI. You've helped find a way to make a chip talk, something no integrated circuit has ever done before.

First application: an electronic aid that helps children learn to spell. The world's first talking textbook. And that's just the beginning. The talking chip's potential is mind-bending. You're glad you got into technology.

The Salesman's Dream.
 You're a TI sales engineer. You've got what is probably one of the most irresistible selling messages in the history of salesmanship. It goes like this: "Hold this TI-59 Scientific Calculator in your hand. Now let's compare it to the most popular computer of the 1950s—the IBM 650."

"The 650 weighed almost three tons, required five to 10 tons of air conditioning and 45 square feet of floor space. And it cost $200,000 in 1955 money."

"Now look at the TI-59 Calculator you're holding in the palm of your hand. It has a primary memory capacity more than double that of the 650. It performs its principal functions five to 10 times faster. And it retails for under $300."

With a story like this, the hardest part of your job is holding onto your sample. You're glad you got into technology.

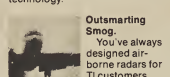

The Joy Of Complication.
 You're in semi-design at TI. You love it when people at parties ask you what you do. You say, "I make things complicated." (Pause.) "In fact, I got promoted recently for creating some major complications."

What you mean (but seldom explain) is this: the more active element groups (AEGs) you can put on a single chip of silicon, the more the average AEG cost goes down. In short, you make things cheaper by making them more complicated. Your work made it possible for a TI consumer product that sold three years ago for about $70 to sell today for $14.95.

Your future looks wonderfully complicated. You're at 30,000 AEGs per chip now and 100,000 is in sight. You're glad you got into technology.

Outsmarting Smog.
 You've always designed airborne radars for TI customers. Now, all of a sudden you know your next radar design is going to stay at the airport. On the ground.

It's on the ground that traffic controllers at Los Angeles International Airport have a problem. They can "see" incoming and outgoing airplanes on their radar just fine, so long as the airplanes are in the air.

But when the airplanes are on the ground—touching down, taking off, taxiing, parking—they are sometimes impossible to see and control. Ground smog obscures them.

You believe you have an answer to the smog problem. You dig out the plans for an airborne ground-mapping radar you helped design. You adapt the design so the L. A. controllers can use it to see through smog. It works beautifully.

Today your smog-piercing radar is widely known as Airport Surface

Detection Equipment (ASDE). It's standard equipment at L. A. International and at the airport in Geneva, Switzerland. Other airports with smog and snow problems are expected to have it soon. You're glad you're in technology.

Oil Sleuths International.
 You're a geophysicist. A good one. You could be with any of the big oil companies. But you wanted to get with a company whose specialty is the same as yours. Exploration.

That's why you're at TI, in Geophysical Service. TI explorer ships, TI photographic aircraft and TI truck- and tractor-mounted vibrator systems are working all over the world. They're finding oil. And they're identifying areas where no oil exists, thereby saving huge losses in drilling costs.

Also, TI's worldwide computer network and its Advanced Scientific Computer is making 3-D recording and processing possible. This exclusive exploration technique is the only practical way to unscramble "no-record" areas on land and sea.

You're a happy sleuth. You're in on the biggest hunt in history. And your team is out in front. You're glad you got into technology.

If you're not in technology yet, think it over. If you are in technology, talk to Texas Instruments

Famous brass comedy team to perform Wednesday night

The Canadian Brass, a quintet critics have called "the Marx Brothers of Brass," will appear Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the deJong Concert Hall, HFAC.

Tickets for the performance are on sale at the Music Ticket Office for $1, students: $3.50, general admission, said Ken Crossley, promotions director.

In reviews that read like the funny papers, the group has been described as "taking the dandruff out of long-haired music."

Eleanor Blau of the New York Times described their audience-capturing antics: "They chatter to the audience. Ronald Romm plays a mean trumpet lying on his back and also plays the rarie."

"The rarie," she continued, "looks like a milk bottle. In order to play it, you have to tilt it, and Mr. Romm always does this incorrectly. So someone has to tell him, 'It's a wrong way to tip a rarie.'"

Canadian Brass trumpeters Frederic Mills and Ronald Romm are alumni of the Julliard School of Music. Mills was a member of the RCA Symphony Orchestra and principal trumpet for the New York City Opera and Ballet Orchestra. Romm was a founding member of the Los Angeles Brass Quintet and New York Brass Society.

Graeme Page was principal french horn in the National Ballet Orchestra and performed with the Toronto Symphony and the CBS Festival Orchestra.

Trombonist Eugene Watts received an M.A. from the New England Conservatory and has played in the Tanglewood Festival Orchestra, National Ballet Orchestra and the National Arts Centre Orchestra.

Charles Daellenbach, who will perform a re-named Rimsky-Korsakov piece, "Flight of the Tuba Bee," is a member of the faculty of the University of Toronto and was dean of the Hamilton Philharmonic Institute.

Crossley said the quintet toured the People's Republic of China as part of an official cultural exchange with Canada in March 1977.

The ensemble will perform nine classical and four popular works, said Crossley. Classics include Schmitt's "Galliard Battaglia," Handel's "Suite From 'WaterMusic,'" Purcell's "Sonata For Two Trumpets," Gabriel's "Canzona Prima A Cinque," Lavelle's "La Rose Nuptiale," and "Flight of the Bumble Bee" by Rimsky-Korsakov.

According to Crossley, the Canadian Brass has several best-selling albums in the U.S. and Canada and recently taped the first in a series of Canadian television shows, "Brass-a-ma-tazz."

Haltern sketches to be seen at Y

Hagen Haltern, assistant professor of art and design, will display his collection of drawings and sketches at the Secured Art Gallery, HFAC, beginning Wednesday.

Haltern has entitled the exhibit "Drawings and Objects." He said, "My work deals with the integration of all visual aspects into a unified vision of life. This vision I call 'Torus-integration. It is the visual language of spiritual wholeness.'"

Haltern studied art and graphic design from 1964 to 1977 in Germany and had his first U.S. show at BYU in 1975. Most of the works he will display are graphite on paper or marbled ground and ink on paper. Some of the pieces will be for sale.

Security liaison committee seeking student volunteers

By WENDY OGATA
Universe Staff Writer

Students are urgently needed to man a committee specifically formed to help improve relations between students and BYU Security.

According to Kelly Scofield, ASBYU Security liaison, the committee's main function will be to organize security open houses for students.

"Hopefully the open houses will bring Security a little closer to the students and show everyone that they're human," he said.

Security realizes that the students don't think too highly of them, Scofield said, "but they really are good people and they are interested in helping us, not hassling us."

"I've received just as many parking tickets as any other student," he said. "Now that I've ridden with the officers and talked with them and Chief Kelsaw, my personal feelings toward them have improved."

"A lot of times, students don't understand the full story, so we just jump to conclusions," said Scofield, a junior from Pittsburgh majoring in political science.

"For example, if we see an officer pull over a bike rider, we think that he has nothing better to do than hassle the student."

"But chances are the officer is checking the bike because it matches the description of a stolen one," he said.

"The main thing is, we must not jump to conclusions. Also, contrary to popular belief, the officers don't have ticket quotas to fill each month."

Scofield said the officers are given a job to do and they do it.

"Students need to realize that the same rules apply on campus as in Provo City. Many times students see Security as a Mickey Mouse operation, but the Security officers are professionals."

They must take the same tests that city police take, and they want to be seen as professionals in the eyes of the students, he said.

"Security says they are very willing to make changes to improve relations with the students, but in order to do this, we need feedback from both sides, not just Security."

"I want to encourage students to let Security know, through me, what they'd like me to improve relations."

Anyone interested in working on the committee that will plan the open houses should apply at the ASBYU offices.

Scofield said if a student has a complaint, he should either put it in one of the complaint boxes located at various points on campus, or take it directly to the ASBYU offices on the fourth floor of the Wilkinson Center.

Spotlights illuminate the great Mormon Temple as thousands from the four corners of the earth gather for the historic Priesthood session in the nearby Tabernacle.

Optimism pervades air in wake of Conference

"We must take it (the gospel) everywhere to everyone," President Spencer W. Kimball told a meeting of regional representatives of the Twelve Friday. He thus set a tone of great optimism and excitement which permeated the entire three-day event.

The enthusiasm of leaders and members was epitomized at the Saturday afternoon session. Thousands of faithful members vigorously elevated their right hands to approve the new revelation granting priesthood privileges and responsibilities to black male members.

The priesthood revelation sets the stage for literal fulfillment of the Lord's injunction, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. . . ." (Matt. 28:19)

Heretofore, missionary work among black people has been seriously restrained because of pressure over denial of the Priesthood to blacks.

But times have changed. The Prophet said Friday, "What about Africa? They have waited so long already. More than one-tenth of the entire population of the world is living on the African continent. . . ."

He said Ghana, Nigeria, Libya, Ethiopia, the Ivory Coast, the Sudan, and others are names which must become as familiar to church members as Japan, Venezuela, New Zealand and Denmark.

President Kimball's vision extends to every other third world country as well. At the conference, he noted that 660 million people speak Mandarin Chinese. "How many of us speak Mandarin?" he asked pointedly.

The prophet sees the church as the best hope for developing nations, not only spiritually, but economically and culturally. And he is willing to use every electronic marvel available to accomplish the task, including television and transistor radios.

A key element in this new era of unheard of growth will be a greatly expanded missionary force. President Kimball noted that 25 percent of eligible young men in the church are serving or have served missions and asked that the number be doubled to 50 percent.

"I can see no good reason why the Lord would open doors we are not prepared to enter," he said, repeating a thought he has expressed throughout his administration.

From extrapolations about the resulting number of converts, it is easy to imagine that one day within our life times, non-English speaking members of the church will outnumber the rest.

But there is much to do. At the priesthood session, President Kimball admonished each member of the church to pray that the Lord will establish his program in the areas of the world where the gospel is presently not allowed.

Latter-day Saints may well follow the example of President Kimball in this regard. It was only after many hours of prayer and supplication that he received the revelation on the priesthood.

The gospel is beginning to fill the whole earth. It's exciting to watch the great rock roll forth, as Daniel prophesied, and even more important, to be a part of the effort.
